SPECHT CAUSED SURPRISE CITY BABIES IN SUMMER

Alexandria Seminary Officials Did Simple Remedies for Making an Not Expect His Elopement.

Young Theolog. Had Written a Letter, Saying He Would Leave the School-Other News.

The elopement of Mr. Joseph Specht of Gunston Hall, and Miss Lena Turner. ughter of one of the wealthiest citizens daughter of one of the wealthiest citizens of Madison county, Ky., as published in The Times, was received with surprise at the theological seminary, near this city, where Mr. Specth has been a student for some years. A few weeks ago he was troubled with his eyes and left the seminary, saying he would return in time for examination.

Yesterday, a letter, dated Richmond, My.,
June 16, was received by a professor at the seminary from Mr. Specht, stating that he had severed his connection with the seminary, as he had determined to get married, which be could not do and remain a student at the institution. He also stated in the letter that the young lady was weather and was not properly cared was wealthy and was not properly cared or by her guardian, and that she was in ill health.

He also stated that after his marriage he would reside either at Gunston Hall or in Washington. Mr. Specht expressed a desire to return to the seminary next fall and complete his studies. This he cannot do, except with the consent of the bishop. Mr. Specht is said to have first met Miss Turner, who is seventeen years of age, in Washingtons, last February. A petition requesting Capt. Infant Comfortabla

Means a Wise Mother May Take for Alleviating the Ill Effects of Town Hout and Confinement.

Country air, country shade and country sunshine are, of course, the ideal environment for the baby, but contingencies often arise which make it absolutely necessary for the devoted mother to remain in her city home during the sommer months, and what cannot clever women accomplish specially when the motive is maternal love. The first thing she does is to see that cool and healthful as possible. The ideal nursery should be sunny, airy and dry. As jutte furniture as possible should be left in the room, and that entirely unuphoistered. Draperies and carpets must be removed, though perhaps a lightweight rug need not be tabooed, as it is more comfortable than the bare floor for the little one to sit upon. The walls of the nursery should always be painted or hard finished, so as to permit flushing or washing. It is a very easy matter in such a nursery so furnished to give it a thorough washing two or three times a week, and if a light antiseptic is added to the water so much the better.

BATHS AND CLOTHING.

BATHS AND CLOTHING. Windows should be open at the top and bottom. There must be a continued re-newal of air in the room without draught. newal of air in the room without draught.
A window board is a very useful acquisition to a nursery, as it deflects the air currents at the bottom, thus preventing draughts.
Any mother can easily construct her own by merely nailing a piece of heavy cloth across a part of the lower sash. Into this nursery may also be introduced automatic so easy with them to add to or lessen the amount.

As to the dress of the little one, the best physicians insist upon the very light, thin, woolen underwear; high-necked and long sleeved, unless the child is more than usually rugged. It is much more wholesome and really cooler than either cotton or silk. It is well to begin the day for our baby with a refreshing lunge salt bath. Sea salt may be procured at any grocer's, and forms a most strengthening adjunct to the bath. Until a child is more than a year old one would hardly give it a bath in temperature.

old one would hardly give it a bath in temperature.

But after the first birthday is passed, one may gradually reduce the temperature to 70 or even 65 degrees. More than one phinge bath a day cannot be recommended, even for the hottest days; but there is no objection to frequently sponging off a little child when it grows fretful from the heat. A suspicion of alcohol added to the water often proves refreshing, and is in no way harmful, while a sponge bath in lukewarm water at night is most soothing and restful, and will often induce sleep in a baby where all other methods have failed.

THE MATTER OF FOOD.

THE MATTER OF FOOD. Of course, nothing plays a more important part in the health of a child than its food. A lending specialist gives the following suggestions as the most up-to-date advices upon this point:

If obliged to give artificial food, the following formulas, which are equally good, will give mixtures the nearest akin to human milk:

1. Milk, four tablespoonfuls, or two onnees; eighteen-pound cream, eight ta-onners; eighteen-pound cream, eight ta-blespoonfuls, or two ounces; lime water, two tablespoonfuls, or one ounce; water, eighteen tablespoonfuls, or nine ounces; milk sugar, seven teaspoonfuls, or seven irachms.

One ounce is nearly equal to three table spoonfuls or eight teaspoonfuls.

SECURING GOOD MILK. In choosing a milk supply it is better to select that furnished by ordinary cows, and not by Jersey, Alderney, or any other highly bred animals. Ordinary cows are less liable to disease. The viighly bred less liable to disease. The slighly bred animals are generally delicate, and it is among them that tuberculosis is especially found. Moreover, the milk from these is richer and less digestible. The mixed milk of a large berd of cows is better than that from a single cow, for if a particular cow is feverieh, as may happen at any time, the infant using its milk alone is in greater danter than if nilk alone is in greater danger than if the milk were diluted with the milk of five or six healthy cows.

The milk must, of course, be sterilized, or rather pasteurized, as it is called now. It was discovered that the old process of sterifization robbed the milk of much of its nutritive qualities. New processes have been devised and new sterifizers in vented by means of which the germs may be killed without destroying the muritive properties of the milk.

The water used in these preparations should always be boiled for five minutes shortly before the mixture is made, and should be kept till used in the same vessel Until a baby has attained a full year, it is better to give it nothing besides milk and mater, but after the first year the diet may be increased by the addition of barley, rice, and oatmeal gruel, soft boiled eggs, custard, red-meat gravy and an occasional crust of bread.

an occasional crust of bread.

From the period of eighteen months until three years old, the food is gradually increased in amount and variety. Bread and butter, porridge, potatoes, certain fruits and neats are all admissible.

The bread should be at least one day old, the porridge may be oatmeat rice, barley meal or wheaten grits; the meat may be rare roast beef, well-cooked mutton, or the white meat of chicken cut up finely or scraped; the potatoes should be baked, not boiled or stewed, and lightly broken up and salted; the fruit may comprise ripe apples pared, grapes freed from the stones and skins, and oranges freed from the fibrous portion. The child should not even taste cake, candy, beer, coffee, or tea, of anything that has been fried.

IN THE COURSE OF A DAY.

IN THE COURSE OF A DAY.

IN THE COURSE OF A DAY.

But almost more important than the food itself is the regularity with which it is given. A child should be fed and put to bed at exactly the same time every day. Indeed, the wise mother who wishes to carry her baby through a summer in the city will have her routine for each day, to which she will adhere as strictly as the soldier to military rule.

Let us say for instance that upon rising the little one is given a vigorous salt water plunge; then a simple wholesome breakfast. As soon after as possible, it should be taken out into the park, so as to get its airing in the early cool of the day, and should be brought in before the sun gets too high. From eleven until the cool of the late aftermoon it should be kept indoors. The careful mother will not fail to have some thought for its amusements and diversions, keeping it as far as possible/from rough, romping games that heut the blood and end in fretfulness, A dall, blunt pair of shears with pictures to cut will keep a little child quiet for many an boar, while hetter still is a basin of water in which to float objects of various kinds. A little care in this direction not only adds to the temporary good nature and comfort of both child and

If hives appear, as they so often do in hot weather, a solution of cooking soda in water is one of the very best remedies. If it, however, prove inadequate, diluted vinegar will often allay the irritation. TWO WISE PRECAUTIONS.

The judicious mother will also look well to it that the little system is never allowed to become clogged, even for a few hours.

A small dose of ipecae or castor oil, or what the physician strongly emphasized as being too little resorted 15 by mothers, an enema of lukewarm water may often prevent a serious illness, an 1 mothers should at all times upon the slightest indisposition examine the throat to see that nothing is wrong there.

STYLES IN SLEEVES.

THE prevailing styles in sleeves are prettier and more artistic and be-coming than anything we have had in years, for they are the happy medium be-tween the happ medium be-tween the happ grotesque balloons just passed into oblivion, and the long straight passed into oblivion, and the long straight over-light coat styles whose tortures still haunt us. The choice in shapes at present is almost unlimited as to the style of ar-runging the upper portion of the sleeve-frills, bell puffs, draperies, points, caps, stashed effects, etc., all prevailing among models for summer gowns.

Heat rash should never be neglected, as it may develop into eczema and even ulcers. The greatest care should be taken to keep the folds of the flesh clean, and if any rash appears a powder made up of the following ingredients applied with a came's hair brush or shaken from an ordinary salter is found to be exceedingly comforting and effective.

the child vomits, which brings instant relief.

But perhaps the most important suggestion is that in every nursery should be hung a sinte, across the top of which is paated a piece of white paper on which is piainty written the address of four physicians in the immediate vicinity, for the use of servants in case emergencies arise when the parents are away. Below this the parents should write, whenever going out, where they may be found. If at the theater, the number of seat, if possible. It is well, also, to have the husband's business address and telephone number written on the state. These precautions may prevent or alleviate many harrowing experiences. Only last week in my own street a little lad fell from the steps and was killed, and not until several bours after were the parents found and informed of the terrible accident.

MARION DEPEW.

TO ADD to the general confusion of the modern and antique in present fashions designers are at this moment experi-menting on double-skirted effects which the Empress Ecgenie introduced in her day of giory. The fashion began by a trimming placed on the skirt to simulate an over-dress; then came the actual overdress, and this is what we are now threatened with this is what we are now threatened with. We already see the overskirt outlined by rows of narrow gimp or ribbon, gathered frilis of lace or of the dress material, but whether the granine double skirt beadopted is a matter now discussed along with the question of the again threatened hoopskirt, and its first coustn, the wire bustle or French tournure.

NEXT to the large Jacque rase and the violet, the very popular flower of the moment is the pectic rarcisse, called most often the defection. It will, on account of the great vogue of the soft on account of the great vogue of the soft yellow thus, retain its popularity all summer—first, as a genuine bloom, afterwards as an imitation, or, in deference to the marvelous Paristan flower workers, as a reproduction. The lack of vitality, like that of many of the artificial roses, cannot be discovered in the beautiful copy until one has touched the flower. It deceives the eye entirely, having all the fresh, delicate appearance and natural glow of the true blossom.
